Feeding
 Pets require a balanced diet (carbohydrates, fats and proteins, vitamins and minerals). A number of reliable commercial brands of pet food are available which are completely balanced. It is easier, and often nutritionally better, to feed a reliable commercial pet food (dry or canned) rather than to feed human foods. Feed the pet, cat or dog, on schedule. Feed 3-4 times daily for puppies and kittens, gradually reducing to 1-2 times daily for mature pets. Must be reduced to 1-2 times daily for mature cats. Avoid feeding milk. This may cause diarrhea or may cause a pet to eat less of his pet food. Some meats, table scraps or cooked egg may be fed if mixed thoroughly with pet food at mealtimes. Pure meat or fish diets can cause nutritional disease.

Travel Tips

- Some states, and all foreign countries, require current rabies and health certificates if visiting or moving to that state or country.
- Most airlines require health certificates, and sometimes rabies certificates, when shipping pets.
- If pet tends to become car sick, take him on frequent short trips to help him become adjusted. Do not feed before or after trips.
